Installing Hiri snap on Linux

Hiri was recently made available as a snap package (<https://www.ubuntu.com/desktop/snappy>) on Linux and that's what you should use to install Hiri if your distribution supports snaps. Otherwise, you should download and use the tarball archive (<https://support.hiri.com/hc/en-us/articles/115003791229-Linux-installation-instructions>).

If you run into problems please open a support ticket (<https://support.hiri.com/hc/en-us/requests/new>).

Step 1

Make sure that you have `snapd` installed on your system. If you're running Ubuntu 16.04 or newer, you'll have it installed by default.

If you're on Ubuntu 14.04, you'll have to install snapd (snap daemon):

sudo apt-get install snapd
```

If you're running a different distro, see How to install snapd on other distros \(https://snapcraft.io/docs/core/install\).

Step 2

Install Hiri snap package:

```
sudo snap install hiri

Step 3

To be able to open links in emails you'll need to install `snapd-xdg-open`. On Ubuntu:

sudo apt-get install snapd-xdg-open
```

If you're not running Ubuntu, you'll have to check if this package exists on your distribution.

Step 4

Type `hiri` on the terminal to run the application, or use the desktop launcher to do so.

Updates

All snaps that you have installed silently update each day. So you'll always be running the latest stable version of Hiri.
